

Our view of death strongly influences how we live our lives.

In his cosmic analyses Martinus shows us that reincarnation, properly understood, is a key to understanding the meaning of life and the purpose of suffering. In the perspective of reincarnation, all our personal experiences and global challenges are seen as nourishment for a rising humane consciousness and future global peace.

This evolution is profoundly connected to the transformation of our gender towards a balance between feminine and masculine qualities within us all.

Mary McGovern, Sören Grind and Pernilla Rosell

For most people in the world death is an unsolved mystery. (Martinus, "What is death?")

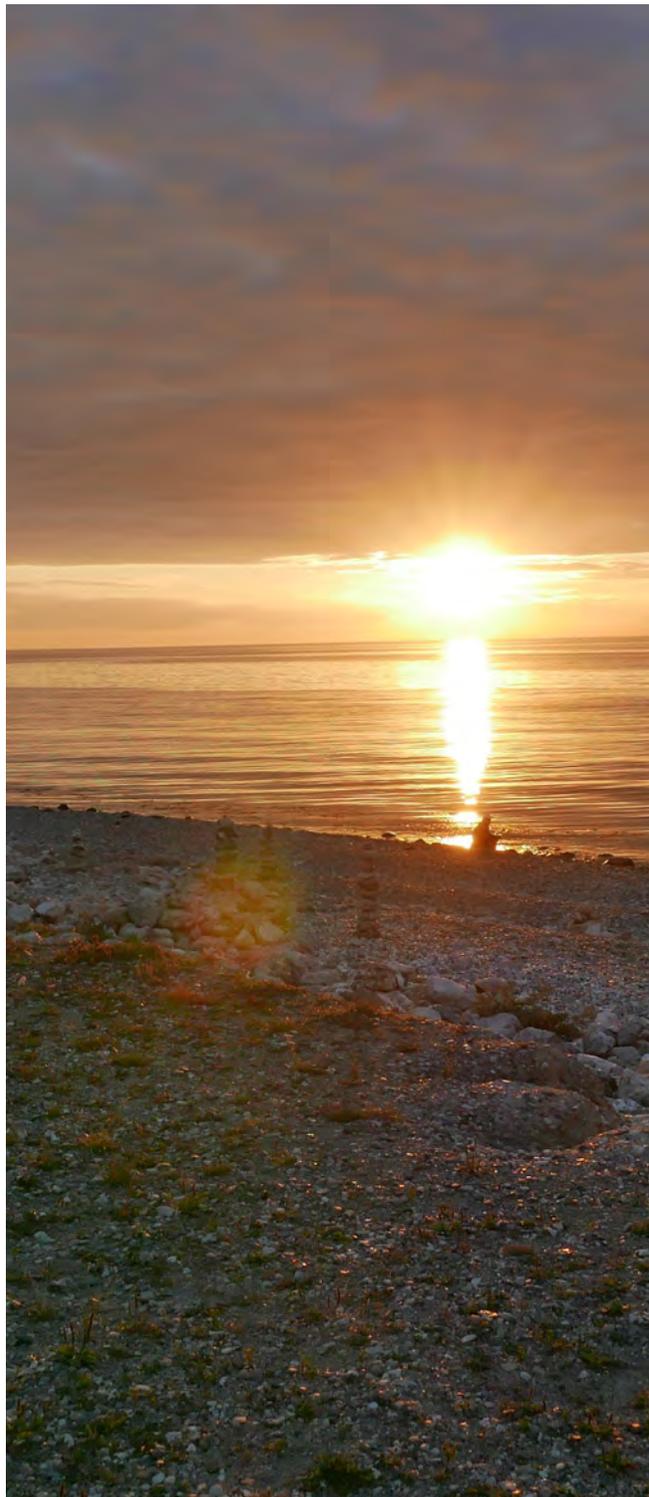

If reincarnation did not exist, the universe would have to be chaos and chance. (Bisættelse, chap. 155)

Reincarnation, death and birth are thus in reality life's very greatest processes of love. (Bisættelse, chap. 158)

Without reincarnation or rebirth in physical terrestrial lives the people could not possibly arrive at the complete experience and realisation of the nature of darkness and light. (Den intellektualiserede Kristendom, section 101)

A continuous accumulation of experience in the consciousness promotes mental growth, which in turn is the same as evolution. (The Eternal World Picture, vol. 2, sect. 171.)

... sexuality is the background behind every form of creation, behind every form for the manifestation of consciousness. (Livets Bog, vol. 1, sect. 130)
