

Welcome to a hybrid course where you will be able to participate either online from your home or physically at the Martinus Centre, Klint, Denmark. Prayer is a science in itself and its use, in conjunction with cosmic science, can guarantee happiness, writes Martinus in his book “The Mystery of Prayer”. We will look at the nature of physical and telepathic prayer, the laws guaranteeing the granting of prayers and at how to pray in the spirit of universal love and complete unselfishness. We will see how prayer can help us establish an intimate relationship to God and give us strength, courage and inspiration to cope with challenging situations.

Practical information

We will meet on 7th October at 19.00/7 pm. Those attending on-site will meet in study room 6 (in the lecture hall building). Those attending online will check in on Crowdcast, where you will also listen to the presentations. The group talks will take place on Zoom with a camera and a microphone enabling participants from both groups to see and talk to one another. Tea and coffee will be served in Restaurant Terrassen. All times mentioned are Central European Time (CET).

Prayer and our communication with the spiritual world

Mary McGovern, Anne Pullar, Micael Söderberg and Pernilla Rosell

”Can, then, prayer guarantee happiness? Yes, prayer can become so perfect that it, in conjunction with cosmic science, can completely expel the dark shadows of sorrow and ill-fortune from the mental sphere of the individual.”
(The Mystery of Prayer)

”Through prayer to God the human being can really become optimistic about its unhappy situation to such an extent that it can see God’s blessing in its dark situation and experience it as a good thing, and can even feel a need to thank God for it, even though it is an unpleasant good thing. The principle and structure of prayer is an open door to God and the highest worlds”
(The Eternal World Picture, vol. 2, 21.15)
