

Welcome to a hybrid course where you will be able to participate either online from your home or physically at the Martinus Centre, Klint, Denmark. To what extent do we have a free will and how much can we influence our fate? According to Martinus's analyses our lives can be compared to a cosmic theatre play, where we are actors, directors, members of the audience and stage hands at the same time. We play different roles on this "stage of life", creating and experiencing our fate based on experiences, habits and talents. Behind the scenes we have the "engine room" that Martinus calls our "night consciousness". Here we have hidden talents and powers that we are not always aware of in our daily life.

Practical information

We will meet on 26th May at 19.00/7 pm. Those attending on-site will meet in study room 6 (in the lecture hall building). Those attending online will check in on Crowdcast, where you will also listen to the presentations. The group talks will take place on Zoom with a camera and a microphone enabling participants from both groups to see and talk to one another. Tea and coffee will be served in Restaurant Terrassen. All times mentioned are Central European Time (CET).

Online participants

You register by mail to: pernilla@martinus.dk, after which you will receive a link to our Zoom room. Price: 250 DKK. You are welcome to listen to the lectures only. If you would like to take part in the talks and dialogues, we would appreciate if you take part actively.

Life as a cosmic theatre – a way of understanding our life

Mary McGovern, Anne Pullar, Micael Söderberg and Pernilla Rosell

"Man's experience of life is really the experience of a gigantic drama, a drama in which we are all members of the cast. But a peculiar thing about this great drama - which we can call fate - is that we are not only the cast or actors, but at the same time also the audience. This play or fate-drama in which we are all both actors and audience is an eternal, scenic panorama ..." (Life's Fate-Drama)

"The play, "fate", is therefore performed in the I's subconsciousness, which can thereby be likened to a theatre. And just as a theatre has a stage with scenery and a backstage area for the actors, and an auditorium with gallery, boxes and stalls for the audience, we can see that in principle the same phenomena in fact apply to the subconsciousness." (Livets Bog, vol. 3, sect. 949)
