Welcome to the Martinus Centre, Klint!

The Martinus Centre, Klint – a centre for courses, holidays and retreats

The Martinus Centre is situated in Denmark on the shores of the Kattegat in a peaceful area of natural beauty near the village of Klint, which lies to the west of Nykøbing Sjælland, the nearest town.

Here in 1935 the writer Martinus founded Denmark's first holiday centre – a centre that has since developed into a modern centre for courses, holidays and retreats with a lecture hall, teaching accommodation, a vegetarian restaurant, a café and guest accommodation including a camping site.

The Centre's charming wooden cottages, log cabins and pavilions with single and double rooms, all set in beautiful countryside, form the physical framework for your stay in Klint.

Courses in Martinus's world picture

The Martinus Centre is a peaceful oasis offering courses in Martinus's works throughout the year in Danish and Swedish. For two weeks in the summer, courses are available in English, German, Spanish and other languages as required. There is also one week in Esperanto.

Holidays and retreats

You can choose between being a retreat guest and/or taking part in courses, listening to lectures and immersing yourself in private study of the world picture described by Martinus in his opus of more than 9000 pages.

A special atmosphere

The Martinus Centre in Klint aims at creating an open and loving atmosphere. There are courses for those who would like to know more about Martinus's analyses, and, during the spring and autumn, there is room for retreat guests who want to immerse themselves in the great questions of life or perhaps just take a break from everyday life.

Come for one week or two!

Summer in Klint

Summer is the busiest season in Klint. There are 6 weeks of summer courses in the Scandinavian languages from the end of June until the beginning of August (27th June – 8th August 2015). The last two weeks are international weeks where there will also be lectures and study groups in English, German, Spanish and other languages as required. During these two weeks the Scandinavian lectures will be interpreted into English, German, Dutch, Spanish and other languages as required. During the last week there will also be lectures and study groups in Esperanto. A wire loop for the hard of hearing is available in the lecture hall. Tuition during the summer weeks costs 1,075 DKK (Danish kroner) per week. You can enrol for one or more weeks as you wish.

Tuition card

During the summer all accommodation is reserved for course participants. For this reason at least one guest per house/flat must pay for a tuition card.

Participation in study groups always requires a tuition card.

Exception

Single parents with children under the age of 12 need not buy a tuition card as long as they do not take part in a study group. They can pay at the door for any lectures they attend.

Tuition is open to everyone

Tuition is based on a different theme for each week, and consists of lectures and study groups. No previous knowledge of Martinus Cosmology is required. There are study groups that accommodate newcomers as well as those with previous knowledge.

Guest accommodation

Guests can rent accommodation at the Centre, where there are pavilions with rooms and small flats, and some charming summer cottages. A camping site is also available.

Voluntary workers

You can also take part in the summer courses by doing practical voluntary work at the Centre (e.g. cooking and cleaning). As a volunteer you have slightly limited access to tuition.

German, Spanish and Esperanto programmes

Programmes for courses in German, Spanish and Esperanto are available on www.martinus.dk or by post from the Martinus Institute.

The Healing Power of Love

It is gradually become widely known that thoughts and feelings have a decisive influence on our health. Some ideas and thought patterns drain our life force and create conflicts in relationships. According to Martinus loving thoughts, on the contrary, recharge our life-force batteries and free up our resources. But what is love, how does the ability to love develop and who are we to love?

Cosmic Education

Many of us have found that suffering and painful experiences, when we have managed to see them from a distance, have developed our compassion and ability to understand others. From an eternal perspective, life is a school whose goal is to train us to love our neighbours. Such a view of life can give us new courage and energy to develop new skills within creative arts, science and humanitarianism.

“My greatest desire is to use my knowledge to help people to love one another”

On Martinus

A new science of love

“My greatest desire is to use my knowledge to help people to love one another”. With these words the Danish writer Martinus (1890-1981) once described his mission at a meeting at the Martinus Institute.

The source of his knowledge was an intuitive ability to experience universal truths that was triggered by a spiritual experience he had at the age of 30. Martinus wrote that the experience enabled him to “apprehend all the main spiritual forces, invisible causes, eternal world laws, basic energies and basic principles behind the physical world.”

He spent the last 60 years of his life making his insights accessible in the form of a new science of love.

Reincarnation

In his main work Livets Bog (The Book of Life) we find a comprehensive description of the universal principles that determine our fate. Studying these principles and applying them to our behaviour towards others will, according to Martinus, awaken dormant centres of consciousness that, in time, will take people to a new, higher state of evolution, which is termed “the real human kingdom” in Livets Bog.

Martinus describes the real human kingdom as a new kingdom of nature following on from the mineral kingdom, the plant kingdom and the animal kingdom. Imperfect human beings, for whom it is not a condition of life to practise universal love, are as yet firmly rooted in the animal kingdom.

In order to further their development human beings must recognise their eternal existence and thereby also the principle of reincarnation, which determines that we evolve through an infinite series of physical reincarnations.

The law of karma

Recognition of the principle of reincarnation gives us an eternal perspective on life, but for life to have a moral dimension, we must also understand the law of karma.

In Livets Bog Martinus writes: “According to the law of karma or fate, no attack whatsoever on any being can exist without it being retribution for an attack the being itself previously made on its surroundings.” When the human being has completely accepted this, the conditions essential to cultivating and transforming the experiences of suffering into neighbourly love exist.

The religious principle

A journalist once asked Martinus, “Are you religious?”, to which he replied, “Yes, for me everything is divine. You only have to sit on a soft chair to feel a divine caress.”

In his symbol books, The Eternal World Picture, one can read that the “religious principle does not only show itself in an ordinary religious way of being. It is also this principle that lies behind materialism, behind all politics and all other prominent forms of consciousness.”

For the same reason the world picture that Martinus describes is not a new religion but, on the contrary, a description of the religion of life itself. In Livets Bog he explains that the religion of life itself “can exist only with absolutely everyone as teachers, with everyone as pupils and with everything as doctrines”.

The Third Testament

The religions have traditionally been a dominating force in the evolution of society, but as people have gradually developed a scientific way of thinking, it has become more difficult to find meaning in the symbolic stories that constitute the core of the religions. For this reason people live increasingly without moral guidance, but must, on the contrary, try to find out what is good and evil through individual and collective experiments.

According to Martinus, Christ, with his exemplary way of being, has already given us the solution to man’s need for moral guidance, but that solution can inspire us today only if it is explained in a scientific way. Martinus therefore wanted his collected works to be entitled The Third Testament. He sees his works as an intellectualised continuation of the Old Testament and New Testament of the Bible, and this idea runs as a unifying thread throughout his collected works.

“The eternal truth”

Christ spoke of the Helper, the Holy Spirit, “whom the Father will send in My name, He will teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all things that I said to you.” (John 14:26) Of this spirit Martinus writes, “Since spirit is knowledge and thoughts, the Holy Spirit or spirit of truth must be the very highest existing knowledge or science that can in fact exist.”

It is up to the individual seeker-after-truth to determine whether The Third Testament expresses “the very highest existing knowledge or science”, but Martinus himself was convinced that a divine Providence had “allowed ‘the eternal truth’ to appear in a new incarnation through him so that it can continue to shine upon the world and give out warmth to it in everlasting youthful beauty, power and radiance.”

The Martinus Institute

Since 1943 the Martinus Institute has been situated in Frederiksberg, Copenhagen. Martinus lived and worked there for almost 40 years until his death in 1981.

Today the building houses the Institute’s administration, bookshop and publishing company, which, as well as publishing Martinus’s books, also publishes the magazine Kosmos in several languages.

The building is also an educational centre providing a programme of lectures, seminars and study groups based on the cosmic world picture that Martinus has described.
